Labinal Power Systems Recognized by Boeing as one of its Best Suppliers of the Year

Toulouse (France) – April 28, 2016

Labinal Power Systems (Safran) has been recognized as a "Supplier of the Year" by Boeing, in Production and Design category, for exceptional performance and contributions to Boeing's overall success in 2015.

Additionally, four Labinal Power Systems sites received the "Boeing Performance Excellence Silver Award": Denton (Texas, USA), Chihuahua (Mexico), Everett (Washington, USA), and MATIS Aerospace in Casablanca (Morocco), the joint venture between Labinal Power Systems and Boeing. These plants supply Boeing 737, 747, 767, 777, 787 and KC46 Tanker programs.

"We are honored to be chosen by Boeing as one of its best suppliers. Boeing is our largest customer in the United States, so this celebration is special to us. Customer focus is the primary element in our daily work and it is satisfying to see the hard work and dedication of our team recognized with this honor", said Jorge Ortega, Vice President and General Manager of EWIS Americas division, Labinal Power Systems.

"This recognition is a rewarding achievement: we exceeded the performance on quality, service and on time deliveries expected. Labinal Power Systems is one of the 12 Boeing suppliers recognized among 13 000 companies. It acknowledges Labinal Power Systems' customer relationship management and our strong collaboration with Boeing. We aim to go above and beyond to deliver more value to our customers", added Alain Sauret, CEO of Labinal Power Systems.
